

Luci Ellis

Head, Financial Stability Department
Reserve Bank of Australia

Luci Ellis joined the Reserve Bank of Australia as a cadet in 1989/90, and commenced working as a graduate economist at the beginning of 1991. She has spent most of her career in various positions in Economic Analysis, Economic Research and Payments Policy Departments, including four years as Deputy Head of Economic Analysis Department. Prior to her current position, she spent almost two years seconded to the Bank for International Settlements, working in their global macroeconomics team.

Dr. Ellis holds a Ph.D. from the University of New South Wales and a Masters degree from the Australian National University. She has written on a range of economic and financial topics, including exchange rates, housing prices, mortgage finance and factor income shares.