Financial Institutions To Stay Open on January 29

Based on the cabinet's January 23 resolution, January 29 will be a public holiday in the provinces where by-election will be held. Voters working outside of those provinces will be allowed to have that day off for traveling to cast their votes in those provinces.

The Bank of Thailand has duly considered the cabinet's ruling, and decides that financial institutions should remain open for business on January 29. Concurrently, they are required to abide by the cabinet's resolution of allowing their employees to return to their home constituencies to cast their votes.
